

Our Army.

There has never been a greater command on this continent than an army as that which Gen. Bragg now commands at Pensacola. It is composed of the very best class of our Southern people—gallant youths, mostly from the country, of the highest social position, and it is dependent circumstances, according to report, by far the most numerous, seconding from Louisiana to the great arm, with a natural taste for military service and the most indomitable courage and fortitude. The number of this army must exceed one thousand, and is made up in about equal proportions of the volunteer troops from the States of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana. These states have each contributed a brigade of over two thousand men, while little Florida has sent at least one thousand. The troops are all encamped in very pleasant and healthy localities; they are in the best spirits, and are rapidly attaining the highest state of efficiency and organization.

We learn that President Davis, in his recent visit, was surprised and delighted at the admirable condition of the army, and complimented Gen. Bragg and his staff in the highest terms for the energy, tact and vigor which they have displayed in organizing and disciplining this large force. The Confederate States are fortunate, indeed, in their chief military commanders. The old army of the United States was inferior to Jeff Davis, as Secretary of War, for the most wholesome reforms which have been achieved in that department since the Government was established. The displacement of the drones and old fogy's of the army, and the bringing forward new talent and energy, the promotion of men of high military qualities, without regard to rank or age, were the great characteristics of Davis' administration. He knew the calibre of every officer in the army, and fearlessly overruled the incompetent and advanced the capable. The same qualities and system have marked the military organization of the army of the Confederate States. If the votes, the honest votes, of all the officers of the United States had been taken in the selection of military commanders, it would have resulted in the choice of the very men whom Davis has called to high commands in the Confederate States.

The secession of such men as Lee, the two Johnstons, Cooper, Bragg, Beauregard, Hardee, and Vandorn, has left the old army in most beggarly condition in regard to military capacity, experience, talent, and all the soldierly qualities. It has left them Harvey, who has long been the opprobrium of the army for his ignorance and brutality; and who, since the death of his gallant brother, the late Dr. Harvey, and his own profligacy in the affair with Sumter, has never been regarded in the South with any other feeling but disgust and contempt. It has left them poor old bold head Wost, the laughing stock of the army, whose calibre and attainments are equal to the position of a Sergeant Major of a regiment. It has left them old gouty Scott—hobbling along with his feet bigger than his head, and growling awfully over the bad supplies of the Washington market. Scott, in all political and military movements, follows his belly. His salary of $17,000 gives him plenty of market money, and Scott, without market money, would be a very poor patriot and soldier.

The Confederate States are relieved of all this old trash; and the officers who command our armies are the pick and choice of the large number of able and accomplished young men, who have reflected so much credit upon the West Point Academy.—N. O. Delta.

According to information received by the New York Express, prodigious efforts are making in England to procure cotton elsewhere than from the United States. The Express says:

Lord John Russell has officially written to all the ministers, consuls and agents of the British Government in the cotton growing States and countries, calling on them to stimulate the production of cotton to the uttermost. Immense efforts are making to that end, and also to cast all reliance upon Southern cotton as speedily as possible.

A company has been formed in Manchester, called the "Manchester Cotton Company," with a capital of $50 millions of dollars, Thos. Bailey, M. P., from Manchester, President. The company started with £500,000, and it was increased to the above sum soon after news of positive separation in America was received.

Another company has also been formed in London, known as the "London Cotton Company," with a capital of fifty thousand pounds, S. Spalding, M. P. chairman. An East India Cotton Company is also formed, with a capital of $1,500,000, and some of the leading capitals of London are connected with it.

A British cotton company of Manchester, with a capital of $1,000,000, has also been formed. The Coventry Cotton Company is also formed, with a capital of $250,000.
